A 20-year-old Tibetan monk, Phuntsok, self-immolated in Ngaba County, Sichuan, China, on 16 March 2011 and died in a hospital early next morning. His act was timed to coincide with the third anniversary of spring 2008 uprising in Tibet to protest against the Chinese rule in Tibet. When Phuntsok was on fire the police doused the flame and began beating him severely. Local Tibetan bystanders rushed to the scene to protect the monk and took him to his monastery – Kirti Monastery. When he was later taken to a hospital, the authorities demanded police clearance for treatment. The monk succumbed to burn injuries the next day around 3 am (local time) on 17 March.

Around a thousand Tibetans gathered in the market joined by hundreds of monks Kirti Monastery and staged a protest against police and the authorities. The People's Armed

In some cases, only section II, or section III may be applicable. None the less, whenever possible, both sections should be filled in.

Police and officers from other security agencies brutally broke the peaceful rally. Several Tibetans were detained from the crowd. Till date over 33 Tibetans have been arrested out of which 11 have been released and the remaining continue to be under detention.

On 23 March protest broke out in the neighbouring Namda Township in Dzamthang County to show solidarity with the Tibetans in Ngaba County. The authorities responded by sending large number of troops to block movement in Dzamthang and Ngaba Counties. A-Dor along with three other known Tibetans (Palko, Dorjee and Woesser Dorjee) and four unidentified Tibetans were arrested and continue to be under detention. They were specifically targeted for their outspokenness to the authorities.

On 8 April, around 30 people staged a protest in front of the Public Security Bureau Office at Warma Township in Dzamthang County. One Tibetan (a young man from Gyalrong County married into a family in Dzamthang County) was critically injured in the police offensive and later died in a hospital. Around a thousand Tibetan staged protest over the death.

V. Indicate internal steps, including domestic remedies, taken especially with the legal and administrative authorities, particularly for the purpose of establishing the detention and, as appropriate, their results or the reasons why such steps or remedies were ineffective or why they were not taken

China is a one party state where there is no independence amongst the state organs in the exercise of rule of law. In such an event, the perpetrators and the refuge to seek remedies exist as one especially in political cases. Moreover, complaints in the past by family members have led to severe repercussion on the family by the authorities instead of providing justice. Past precedence and existence of perpetrators and the refuge to seek remedies in enforcing state policies have stopped victims and their families in seeking domestic remedies.
